Introducing Michael Guihot

My name is Michael Guihot and I have recently joined Everingham Solomons. I will be working mainly in commercial litigation resolving commercial disputes either through the court process or by mediation or any of the other alternatives to the court process that are available.

I worked as a litigation solicitor in a large Sydney firm for 7 years before I took a role as an in house lawyer with Diageo Australia Limited. In my role at Diageo I reviewed the company's contracts and advised it on issues relating to trade mark protection, Trade Practices Act compliance and a range of other advertising and promotion compliance requirements.

For the last, almost 3 years, I have been a partner in a small firm in Sydney specialising in commercial litigation and commercial work including for some of the country's biggest registered clubs.

Any dispute can be traumatising for those who are in it. I pride myself in being able to manage the issues in dispute and to provide advice on the best way to resolve disputes. If the parties to a dispute cannot resolve it, the Courts will. I have run many cases before courts and tribunals and can help you through what is often a complex area for those not involved in it on a regular basis.

I have recently moved to Tamworth from Sydney with my family so that my children can enjoy to type of life that I had growing up in the country.

I now look forward to becoming part of the Tamworth community and helping local people and businesses with any disputes that they might have.

At Everingham Solomons, helping you is our business.
